EXAMINER'S AMENDMENT

1. An examiner's amendment to the record appears below. Should the changes and/or additions be unacceptable to applicant, an amendment may be filed as provided by 37 CFR 1.312. To ensure consideration of such an amendment, it MUST be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee.

The title of the application has been amended as follows:

MECHANISM TO AVOID EXPLICIT PROLOGS IN SOFTWARE PIPELINED DO-WHILE LOOPS

REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Applicant on page 7 of the response states that the Tirumalai reference teaches the operations of DO loop (often referred to as FOR loops) and does not teach the operations of DO-WHILE loops. The Applicant is correct. The reference does in fact teach many aspects of what is grossly old and well known in FOR loop optimization.

Arguments Toward Predicates

Tirumalai does not teach or suggest "assigning a predicate register for each exit of a DO-Loop. However, Muthukumar et al in USPN #6,571,385 does each the use of a predicate at each exit of a DO-WHILE loop for pipelining. This limitation is not novel. Applicant's term speculative instruction is the portion of the loop control that makes the DO loop a DO WHILE loop.

Argument's Toward LIVE-IN Values

Applicant's statements that the Tirumalai teaches the mechanisms to provide for dependency analysis is correct as is the statement that the reference does not go to the level of actually teaching how. For "FOR" loops this topic is well documented. For DO-WHILE loops references are scarce. The closest reference of record is the Muthukumar et al USPN #6,820,250 reference.

When taken singularly or in combination the combination of the two Muthukumar patents does not teach the claimed invention of the instant application. The instant invention provides of pipelining of DO-WHILE loops with preservation of LIVE-IN values.

Unlike the pipelining of FOR loops, the pipelining of DO-WHILE loops is relatively new. As evident by a well published author on compiler design, Steven Muchnick in his text book "Advanced Compiler Design and Implementation" published August 19, 1997 on page 551, he states the loop optimization of loops where the number of iterations is unknown is not possible. "Since software pipelining moves a fixed number of iterations of a loop out of the loop body, we must know in advance that the loop is repeated at least that many times, or we must generate code that tests this, if possible, at run time and that chooses to execute either software pipelined version of the loop or one that is not. Of course some loops it is not possible to determine the number of iterations they take without executing them, and software pipelining cannot be applied to such loops." The claimed invention appears to be a novel approach.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
